

John Maya Salazar assumed his position as CEO of EPM and leader of the EPM Group.

The engineer from Antioquia, John Maya Salazar, was sworn in this Monday, January 1, 2024, as CEO of EPM, a position in which he will lead the EPM Group for the four-year period from 2024-2027. He is replacing engineer Jorge Andrés Carrillo Cardoso.

John Maya Salazar's appointment was announced on November 15 by the Mayor of Medellín, Federico Gutiérrez Zuluaga. "It is an honor for me and a very great responsibility to return to EPM as CEO. We will work as a team to continue providing public utilities with quality, continuity, coverage and availability, contributing to the quality of life of the community and the development of the territories in which we are present," said the new CEO of EPM.

The CEO of EPM is an electrical engineer from Universidad Pontificia Bolivariana, with a specialization in Management for Engineers from the same university. He has 39 years of professional experience, more than 33 of them in the public sector and five in the private sector.

John is now returning to EPM, a company in which he has held various positions. His last positions were executive vice president of Projects and Engineering and Business Management, which he led between 2016 and 2019. During his professional career, he was also manager of the company Ingenierías Aliadas and consultant.

"We will work for EPM to remain a leading company that is solid and in the heart of the people, with quality services and new solutions that respond to the needs of the community," said John Maya Salazar, CEO of EPM.

About EPM

EPM, headquartered in Medellín, is the parent company of the EPM Group, with presence in six countries: Mexico, Guatemala, El Salvador, Panama, Colombia and Chile. Its business portfolio includes: power generation, power transmission, power distribution, gas, water supply, wastewater management, solid waste management and sales of new solutions.